

DARRYL ELMOUCHI

Darryl Elmouchi, M.D., serves as the chief operating officer for Providence. Responsible for operational oversight and strategy, he works to ensure access to a portfolio of vital, high-quality and affordable services across the Providence footprint while also leading the organization's care transformation strategies. Additionally, he oversees home and community care, compliance, real estate, facilities, supply chain and key clinical care functions.

Prior to this role, Dr. Elmouchi served as COO of Corewell Health, headquartered in Michigan, where he oversaw strategy, operations, clinical care delivery and financial performance for the organization's entire clinical enterprise of hospitals, ambulatory portfolio and post-acute care network.

A practicing physician until 2020, Dr. Elmouchi earned his medical degree from University of Michigan Medical School, his MBA from University of Michigan's Ross School of Business, and holds a certificate in biostatistics from University of Michigan School of Public Health. He completed his internship, residency and chief residency at University of California, San Francisco and fellowships in cardiac electrophysiology and cardiovascular medicine at University of Michigan Health System.
